A Little Riddle

By Heidi Bee Roemer

They grow in a field
in a tangle of vines.
There are many varieties—
at least forty-five kinds!

Mostly, they're orange.
But they come in all hues:
Red, yellow, green,
tan, teal, and blue.

Some are small as an egg
and weigh a few ounces.
Some are big as a ball,
but without any bounces.

Some are smooth. Some are bumpy.
Some are round as the sun.
Some are flat as a pancake.
It's hard to choose one!

Here's one I want.
I finally found it.
But it's so humongous,
My arms can't reach around it!

What is it? Answer: a pumpkin
