

Maps: Then and Now

by Heidi Bee Roemer

Cartographers in ancient times
made maps in simple ways.
Maps of old were etched in stone
or tablets made of clay.

Maps were drawn on goatskins
or on fragile parchment scrolls.
Clay balls wrapped with linen strips
were used in making globes.

Today our maps are digital
with interactive scenes.
I can view maps on my tablet,
on my phone or laptop screen.

Satellites send signals
to receivers in my phone.
My GPS provides live maps
and navigates me home!
